

The day of this writing, the Illegal 13th, shall be a historic day for the Tauhan people, a day marked by celebration for generations to come.

It is this day that we learned that we are not alone, and that beyond the Horn and the Spine lies a bountiful land and a proud kingdom. My people cry out for the love of the Rove to explore this new world, and to this purpose I have entrusted a letter with the Heralds to find the highest authority of this kingdom.

If the gods see fit, then perhaps the legendary Rat King Nibbles himself reads these words.

I ask for your hospitality and welcome as my people roam these new lands, and if your people be gracious, guides so they may better appreciate the majesty of all within your kingdom.

Of course, we also welcome your people to experience all the wonders of the Tauhan Empire; it would be the pleasure of my priests and highest courts to arrange escorts for all the people of Grovel so they, too, might enrich themselves with the light of the Rove.

We have much to learn of your culture and people, but if they share appetites with their smaller cousins of which we are familiar, perhaps they may have an interest in our legendary ocean Hosts, the heart and soul of our people and a source of endless bounty. If it pleases the Immortal King Nibbles, I would be honored to direct some of our fleet to shepherd a school of finest fish from our Hosts along our shared coast, so you may partake in an exceptional delicacy I believe to be unique to the Touhan Empire.

My halls are already alight with speculation as to your reply, even as I write this letter. Know that all of the Tauhan eagerly await your response.

In Anticipation;

Uniter of the Fleets, Vessel of the Gods, Highest of the Touhan Empire, The Twice Born Prince.
